

It was a big day for Annie. Leo was giving her flying lessons!

“Today you’ll learn the three most important tricks for flying Rocket,” said Leo. “Are you ready?”

“Ready, big brother!” Annie said excitedly.

“Okay, here’s the first lesson you’ll need to master—the Up-and- Down Trick,” said Leo. “If you want to make Rocket jump over something, you need to reach your arms up really high above your head and then bring them down really fast.”

“I think I’ve got it!” exclaimed Annie. “I just bring my arms way up and then pull them back down.”

“Great job, Pilot Annie!” Leo said, beaming.
Can you try the Up-and-Down Trick? Way to go!

“Next, you’ll need to know the Squeeze Trick,” explained Leo.

“It comes in handy when you need to fly Rocket through a really tight space.”

“Whoa, that sounds hard!” said Annie.

“This is fun!” Annie shouted.

Can you cross your arms and pat your shoulders? Great job!!!

After she mastered the Up-and-Down Trick and the Squeeze Trick, Annie was ready to learn the hardest move of them all—the Loop-de-Loop Maneuver!

“Okay, this one is a bit difficult,” cautioned Leo. “To make Rocket do big roller-coaster loops in the air, you need to clap your hands in a circle.”

After watching her brother a few times, Annie joined in and made big clapping circles in the air with him.

“Hey, I’m doing it!” laughed Annie. “I should give myself a big hand!”

Can you do the Loop-de-Loop Maneuver? Hooray!

After Annie's flying lesson, the team decided to blow some superbubbles.

Do you like to blow bubbles?

The Little Einsteins blew their superbubbles into some pretty wild shapes! What shapes do you see?

Annie ran to find her camera. She wanted to take pictures of the team's superbubbles before they all popped.

"I've got an idea," said June. "Let's all blow bubbles at the same time and make one humongous superbubble!"

Can you pretend you're blowing superbubbles with the Little Einsteins?
